| | From 19 to 22 June 1953, all was quiet in Passwalk and the KVP barracks installation. On 19 June, a KVP officer stated that 3 companies were in readiness while another company was on guard duty. On 22 June, one company was in readiness at the barracks installation while another company wearing red-bordered black epaulets did guard duty and a third company guarded the railroad permanent way and the railroad stations halfway along the line to Prenzlau and halfway along the line to Neubrandenburg. On 22 June, 45 men wearing red-bordered black epaulets on prime mover arrived at the railroad station to relieve the guard detail. There was still martial law in force. Town police and SED auxiliary police patrolled the streets. | | |
